

The first Post-it was invented by accident.
Just like humans.

When Dr. Spencer Silver tried to create an ultra-strong glue, he ended up with a weak, reusable adhesive.
Missed the mark—but hit something else entirely!
His colleague later thought to use it for little notes.
One man's mistake, another's discovery...

The first tree appeared 385 million years ago.
It looked like a giant 8-meter fern.
Its name was Wattieza.

The first human appeared around 4 million years ago and looked more like a chimpanzee.
He didn't need Post-its — he “just” needed to survive.
But he did need trees —
to climb, to hide, to sleep.

From the first humans to us,
the number of Post-its has gone up,
and the number of trees has gone down.

Tell me what you have to do,
and I'll tell you how old you are.

Wake up
Eat
Do your business (small/big)
Play
Sleep

Wake up
Listen
Be good Learn
Write
Read
Sleep

Wake up
Brush your teeth
 your eyes your hands
Wash your clothes your car your brain
Go to bed

Wake up
Go to work to the gym

Shop
Cook clean Meet up Put down your phone your laptop your TV remote Go to bed (with or without)

Wake up
Stick all your Post-its to yourself
Step outside on an autumn day
Let the wind carry you away

Cătălina Matei (born 1988, Bucharest) is a Romanian language teacher and a PhD candidate at the Faculty of Letters, University of Bucharest, where she teaches a seminar in Literary Theory and a course on Reading Techniques.

She has published two poetry collections: Lanul cu sârme întinse (Tracus Arte, 2014) and Iubirea pentru morți e cea mai mare (Casa de Pariuri Literare, 2022).

In another life, she made music — while studying at the Faculty of Letters and completing a Master's in Literary Theory and Comparative Literature, she also attended the National University of Music Bucharest (UNMB), majoring in piano performance.

She has worked as an editor and translator — among her translations are 1984 by George Orwell (Editura Bestseller, 2022) and, together with Diana Geacăr, Poeme alese by Anne Sexton (Tracus Arte, 2019).

From 2013 to 2019, she ran the literary café Tramvaiul 26.

In 2024, she won First Prize at the National Slam Poetry Competition, part of the Transylvania International Spoken Word Festival.